IN PERFECT HARMONY with NewSpace

Linda Huebner has been involved with South Side Imperial Dance Club for 25 years. Currently, she serves as the club's audio director. With duties that include selecting music, compiling CDs and designing CD covers, her workspace was cluttered and needed organization. Linda wanted storage for all her CDs, equipment and supplies, plus accessibility.

NewSpace Design Consultant Denise LeVine recommended features to make accessibility nearly effortless and storage precise—all with a great look! Linda's new office features pull-up bars beneath upper cabinets so she can stand to access the upper shelves, roll-out shelving and "perfect-fit" CD storage below. In case you're wondering, audio equipment occupies an easy-access cabinet at just the right height. Although Linda's "before" and "after" pictures imply her satisfaction in changing her old space to NewSpace, we asked her—just to be sure. How does she feel about her NewSpace office? "Great!" Linda says. ●

CHANGING SPACES from Ordinary to Extraordinary!

When finishing the lower-level entertainment room in their newly built home, Nina and David Cissell wanted more than the standard choices offered by the builder or kitchen companies. For starters, they wanted a bar that reflected the character of their contemporary furniture.

This project—where nothing "off the rack" fit their needs—required designers who understood function and proportion and could manage challenges. A support post conspicuously located in the middle of the bar area was just such a challenge.

Having worked previously with NewSpace designers Jerry Cox and Lynn Allen on closet and home office projects, the Cissells knew the expertise NewSpace would provide in offering a fresh, unique approach. In a planning process that Nina calls, "a real collaboration," the designers presented ideas; the Cissells expressed their goals and preferences. "After we talked, Jerry and Lynn's creativity took over. The net result is a functional bar that is a beautiful conversation piece when we entertain," Nina says. ●

NewSpace provides much more than "standard issue" when it comes to style, craftsmanship and function.

"I needed designers that understood function, scale and character of the house."

THE "ART" OF Customer Satisfaction

Marian Steen surrounds herself with her artwork...and the artwork of others. When it comes to decorating her home, this St. Louis artist—featured in the 2002 St. Louis Art Fair—showcases her own artwork, as well as the beautiful pieces she collects.

If a picture's worth a thousand words... these photos say it all!

When finishing her living space, Marian wanted it all: a beautiful look and efficient function. NewSpace designed an entertainment center that displayed her artwork and efficiently hid the TV and audio equipment when not in use. Even her photo albums found a home behind cabinet doors.

With her art studio, closets, and home office previously designed and installed by NewSpace, Marian knew what to expect. "Choosing NewSpace was an easy decision since I've worked with them several times before. The designers at NewSpace listen to my ideas and create perfect solutions for me," she says. ●

"I knew everything would be organized in a beautiful piece of furniture with places for the artwork I wanted displayed."

LOVING TOUCHES from NewSpace

“I needed someone like Amy who can take an idea and make it better than I ever dreamed.”

Donna Farmer
NewSpace Client

Special things deserve special treatment...especially when they're made by special people. Donna Farmer wanted a distinctive means to display daughter Lisa's beautiful dolls. More than just collectibles, the dolls—and their clothes—were lovingly handmade by Lisa's grandmother! Although deserving of a special display, most of Lisa's collection had been stored in boxes since the family's move to their Central West End home.

Ready-made furniture didn't suit her specialized needs, so Donna called NewSpace after seeing our newspaper ad. Design Consultant Amy Howell listened to Donna's ideas and created a design that displayed Lisa's many dolls and allowed extra storage, but didn't overwhelm the room. "Amy not only designed a great display wall, she helped arrange the dolls, too," Donna says. "Now, I'm working with Amy to add a desk area to complete Lisa's room." ●

NewSpace Designer Amy Howell found a unique way to display the time, love and talent evident in these handmade dolls.
